

PRESS RELEASE

Is there live after diving? Yes, when you go with Sam's Tours Palau.

"Dive & Chill" is the parole for 2011 in the land at the end of the rainbow

Koror/Dusseldorf, January 22, 2011 – No need to be bored after diving. Choose to dive with Sam's Tours and benefit from the infrastructure of Palau's premier dive centre

Every diver wants to maximize their dive trip: Having just finished a stunning dive, all you want to do is to switch the tank and hop back into the underwater world. This is especially true if you took the effort of a long travel time from Europe to Palau to dive in a place which is regularly chosen as one of the top ten in diving. Yet, at some point a saturation level is reached and guests look for ideas to fill the idle time until they hit the water again.

Sam's Tours provides great ways to fill that break. Underwater photographers and videographers will find a perfectly equipped photo and video center with seven iMacs along with matching photo and video editing software to spice up their best photos. Guests looking to stay in contact with the outside world or make their friends jealous can quickly check their e-mails or send pictures of Palau's wonders.

Next stop is Bottom Time Bar & Grill. The kitchen crew offers the daily catch of the day or typical bar snacks for that small snack right after diving, along with what is probably the best Cappuccino in the Pacific. Returning divers exchange adventures and stories over a beer and are often joined by sailors from the Royal Belau Yacht Club operated by Sam's Tours.

For active guests looking for adventure before flying home, Sam's recommends a kayak trip through the Rock Islands. The naturalist guides at Sam's Planet Blue Kayak Tours know the waters of Palau better than anyone. Learn about the flora and fauna, the eco-system and the history of this nature paradise as they passionately share their knowledge.
